RESTORED UNITS

PRIMUS NULLIFICATOR — COMMAND

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 PRIMUS NULLIFICATOR

115 Points

With the increase of uncontrollable occurrences of daemonic incursion across the galaxy, many officers within the Legiones Astartes on both sides of the conflict resorted to arcane and superstitious means to counter the little-understood threat. These pioneers sanctioned research into esoteric artefacts and weapons, and openly sought prohibited lore in the hope that it would provide wisdom capable of combating the galaxy’s intangible horrors. These commanders, who were first among the Nullificators, forged an example and encouraged those serving under them to also seek out by any means necessary the answers to the arcane threat.

PSYCHIC DISCIPLINE - Aetherbane

Ranged Weapon	R	FP	RS	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Aetherblast	18	1	4	3	1	Blast (3"), Sanctic, Crude Exegesis	Ranged, Psychic

Sanctic
A weapon with this special rule always Wounds Daemons on a 2+ and any successful Invulnerable Saves made by Daemon Models against any Wounds it inflicts must be re-rolled.

Crude Exegesis
When rolling to scatter for this weapon, if both D6 result in the same number, for example both dice show a result of 3, the template is instead positioned over the centre of the Model that is making the attack, regardless of the result rolled on the Scatter dice.

SPECIAL RULES

Credo Annihilato
An army that includes at least one Primus Nullificator ignores the 0—1 restriction on Nullificator Squads, and may select Nullificator Units as Troops choices, which gain the Support Unit (1) special rule.

0—1 NULLIFICATOR SQUAD — SHOCK ASSAULT

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 NULLIFICATOR SERGEANT, 4 NULLIFICATORS

200 Points

- May include up to 5 additional Nullificators at +40 Points per Model.

Only as Horus' rebels revealed the true corruption at their hearts did the Nullificators begin to appear in the order of battle of the Legiones Astartes. The first such units were ad-hoc assemblies of veteran warriors wielding hastily manufactured weaponry and poorly understood superstition in a brave attempt to stem the tide of madness Horus had unleashed upon the Imperium. Few of these valiant warriors would survive, but the wisdom bought with their lives armed their successors all the better. By the final years of the Horus Heresy, the Nullificators had become a highly disciplined arm of the Legions, forged in the crucible of desperation to counter the threat of the foulest xenos breeds and the daemonic incursions that had become all too frequent.

WARGEAR

Aether-shock Maul

A type of anti-Daemonic melee weapon devised by the Legiones Astartes during the Horus Heresy and often used by the Legion consuls known as Primus Nullificators who were charged with seeking to contain and defeat Warp entities by both sides in the conflict.

Based on a similar technology to the Volkite Weapons developed on Mars, these vicious Shock Mauls discharged pulses of stored actinic energy when they struck a foe, which could prove particularly damaging to the physical corpus of Daemons materialised in realspace.

Melee Weapon	IM	AM	SM	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Aether-shock Maul	-1	A	+2	3	1	Breaching (6+), Deflagrate	Power

SPECIAL RULES

Hexagrammatic Wards

Hexagrammic Wards (also spelled Hexagrammatic) are techno-arcane devices from the Dark Age of Technology, designed to protect against psychic forces. These wards strengthen the boundaries between realspace and the Warp in a small area, reducing the effects of warp incursions. These wards are utilised by a variety of Imperial and Chaos forces.

Any roll To Wound for an attack made with a weapon with the Psychic trait against a Model with this special rule suffers a penalty of -1.

VETERAN DESPOILER SQUAD — ELITES

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 VETERAN DESPOILER SERGEANT, 4 DESPOILER VETERANS

105 Points

- May include up to 5 additional Despoiler Veterans at +19 Points per Model.

Where Despoiler squads were formed from Tactical Marines adapting to the brutal exigencies of close-quarters warfare, Veteran Despoilers were something altogether more deliberate. Warriors who had long since forsaken the bolter out of choice, honed through years of boarding actions, tunnel fights and the savage work of void-deck clearances.

 - Heavy Chainsword +5 Points

FARITH REDLOSS — HIGH COMMAND

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 FARITH REDLOSS

200 Points

Even in the chronicles of a Legion as renowned as the Dark Angels, the name of Farith Redloss has gained a notoriety that exceeds many among his peers. His fame stems not from simple skill with a blade or gun, but from an exhaustive knowledge of all the weapons of war wielded by the sons of the Lion. In war, it is to this warrior that the Lion turns when a foe must be brought down whatever the cost, when the hidden and terrible weapons bestowed upon the First Legion by the Emperor Himself must be unleashed. Like many among the Dark Angels, Farith was born of grim Caliban during the days when mighty beasts roamed the land and tormented those that called that world home. His own village was destroyed by one such beast, and in the wake of that tragedy he swore his loyalty to the Order and to the warrior that led them, Lion El’Jonson. Still young enough to endure the gruelling conversion process to join the ranks of the Legiones Astartes when the Emperor finally reunited with the Primarch of the First Legion, Farith would follow his sworn lord into the Great Crusade and the Horus Heresy that followed it.

WARGEAR

The Dreadbringer’s Plate

Crafted after the Legion made Caliban its new home and the Lion reforged the Hexagrammaton, this baroque suit of artificer plate is as much a symbol of the Dreadwing as any icon or badge of office. Its armoured skin is formed of a composite of hardened ceramite and ferro-crystalline ores unique to Caliban, and can withstand even the most ferocious of corrosives undamaged. Legend has it that the First Master of the Dreadwing once walked through a maelstrom of phosphex wearing this armour and emerged unscathed.

Against any weapon with the Melta (X) special rule, Farith Redloss’s Invulnerable Save is increased to 2+. Additionally, any weapon with the Poisoned (X) special rule can only wound Farith Redloss on the roll of 6+.

The Axe of Castigation

An artefact-weapon crafted on Caliban long before the coming of the First Legion, the Axe of Castigation is said to have been used by the High Executioner of the Order to execute knights who had forsaken their vows of loyalty or shown cowardice that had cost the lives of fellow warriors.

The Axe of Castigation is considered a single weapon with two profiles that represent different fighting styles employed by Farith Redloss. Before making any Melee Attack, choose one of following profiles:

Melee Weapon	IM	AM	SM	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
The Axe of Castigation (Overhead Strike)	-4	-1	+3	2	1	-	Power
The Axe of Castigation (Sweeping Strike)	I	A	S	2	1	Reaping Blow (3)	Power

SPECIAL RULES

Master of the Arsenal

Redloss was noted even among the ranks of the First Legion as a master of weaponry. Though not the finest bladesman nor most accurate marksman, he, among all his brothers, was the most knowledgeable in the deployment and use of the vast arsenal available to the Dark Angels Legion. Myth holds that he could identify any weapon simply by the sound of a single shot fired and without ever beholding the device.

At the start of any battle, the controlling player may select one of the following weapons – Farith Redloss gains the use of that weapon for the duration of the battle:

Tyrhenian pattern Neural Shredder Carbine

Lost Tyrhenius was the origin of many profane weapons, worst among them being the various neural shredders its weapons artisans created, each acting directly upon the target's nerve system and bypassing almost all known types of armour. So terrible were these weapons that the Emperor decreed both them and the rebel forge that created them be destroyed, leaving only a few relics of Tyrhenian craft in the armouries of Terra and the Dark Angels.

Ranged Weapon	R	FP	RS	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Tyrhenian pattern Neural Shredder Carbine	18	2	1	2	1	Poison (4+), Ignores Cover, Pinning (0)	Assault

Magaron pattern Atomantic Pulse Pistol

Capable of piercing the plating of almost any armoured vehicle known to the armies of Mankind, atomantic pulsers are rare and valuable relics that even the most learned of Tech-Priests cannot replicate. It is only within the private arsenals of Ferrus Manus and the legendary armoury of the Dark Angels that such weapons can still be found.

Ranged Weapon	R	FP	RS	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Magaron pattern Atomantic Pulse Pistol	6	1	8	2	1	Shock (Stun)	Pistol

Selenite Shard-bolt Pistol

A relic of the Selenite weaponsmiths of Luna, one of many weapons provided to the Emperor to fight the wars of Unity on Old Earth. In the wake of the Lunar enclave's destruction, few of these weapons remain, each crafted to counter the warp-magicks wielded by the more fearsome warlords that had claimed territory on Ancient Terra. The examples that remain in the Dark Angels' arsenal are perhaps the last of these finely made weapons to exist.

Ranged Weapon	R	FP	RS	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Selenite Shard-bolt Pistol	12	4	4	5	1	Rending (6+), Moonsilver	Pistol

Moonsilver

Any unsaved Wound caused against a model with the Daemon Unit Type or Psyker trait is instead counted as two Wounds. Wounds caused in excess of the model's remaining Wounds do not spill over to other models.

IRON-FATHER AUTEK MOR — HIGH COMMAND

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 AUTEK MOR

200 Points

Both Iron-Lord and Iron- Father to the Morragul Clan Company, Autek Mor held a sinister reputation within his Legion, and dark rumours accompanied him long before the outbreak of the Horus Heresy, including whispered accusations that the origins of his gene-seed or perhaps his bloodline were not as they should be. A Terran by birth, he was a part of the Xth Legion’s first intake and fought in the reconquest of the Sol System. He held field command by the time of his Primarch’s finding, having already developed a reputation both as a weaponsmith and malevolent soul, already having killed several of his own Legion in duels over ‘slights to his honour’, and ruling his company with a cruel and unforgiving fist. No love was lost between Autek Mor and his Primarch, but despite this, when his grand cruiser, the Red Talon, arrived at Isstvan V when the void battle was at its height, he attacked in an attempt to reach the surface and was only driven off after sustaining massive damage, fleeing the system dogged by murderous pursuit.

Armis Panoptikos

Designed and constructed by Mor himself, the Armis Panoptikos combined the functions of heavy battleplate, multi-spectral auspex cogitation network and sophisticated biological support system in one. Despite its vast weight, bulk and apparent complexity, Mor could operate the numerous additional limbs as if they were his own thanks to a neural-interface matrix etched into his skin, allowing him to see, hear and feel through the suit as if it were his own flesh.

The Armis Panoptikos incorporates a manipulator array (See Legacies of the Age of Darkness, page 48) with which Autek Mor may make two additional attacks in the Assault phase using the weapon profile below.

Melee Weapon	IM	AM	SM	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Armis Panoptikos	-4	2	6	2	2	Precision (3+), Shred (4+), Armourbane	Melee

Argonikos

The immense, double-headed halberd that Autek Mor carried into battle and bore as a self-appointed badge of office was another of his own creations, constructed with countless layers of ferro-alloy liberated from the ancient forges of Damas.

Melee Weapon	IM	AM	SM	AP	D	Special Rules	Traits
Argonikos	-1	A	+2	2	1	Reaping Blow (2)	Power

SPECIAL RULES

Tyrant’s Wrath

Any unit made up of models with the Iron Hands trait that Autek Mor has joined may add +1 to Combat Resolution. After this has been used, the unit suffers a single wound with no Armour Saves or Damage Mitigation rolls allowed, not factored into the Combat Resolution.

In addition, an army with Autek Mor included may make an additional Reaction during the opposing player’s Shooting phase as long as he has not been removed as a casualty.

Tsolmon Khan — High Command

Unit Composition: 1 Tsolmon Khan

170 Points

- This Model may be replaced with 1 Tsolmon Khan on Scimitar Jetbike for +50 Points.

Tsolmon Khan did not fit the mould from which many of the Great Khan’s Chogorian sons were cast, towering over most of his brothers and with an imposing bulk more suited to one of Ferrus Manus’ dour sons. Despite this, he was one of the most devoted adherents to Jaghatai Khan’s reforms of the Vth Legion, fluent in both Khorchin and Terran gothic, and possessing a dry wit and flair for the solemn poetry favoured by the Khagan. His quiet courage and resolute loyalty were considered as much an asset as the sheer strength with which he wielded his hammer, for he showed little mercy to those who dared to take up arms against his Legion and the Primarch he swore to follow.

- Tsolmon Khan on Scimitar Jetbike: Cavalry (Unique, Command)

SPECIAL RULES

Ally of the Silent Order

In the wake of the campaign at Chondax, Tsolmon Khan carried a number of relics once belonging to Knight-Centura Calistis Merovin to the Sisters of Silence along with testimony of their sister’s bravery. In return they undertook to provide a guard of honour to stand beside him in battle, an honour extended to very few in the history of the Imperium.

When a Model with this Special Rule is included in a Detachment, two additional Force Organisation Slots are added to that Detachment. These Slots can only be filled by a single Knight Centura and a single Anathema Cadre Unit. These Units can be included even though they do not have the same Faction Trait as the other Units in that Detachment.

WARGEAR

Tians’han

Chogorian legends tell of the Tians’han, or ‘the mountains that climbed to heaven’ and it is from these tales that the great hammer Tsolmon Khan carries takes its name. Much like its bearer, the hammer is of outsized proportions, even compared to the other weapons of the Legiones Astartes – imposing and unforgiving, like the grey granite peaks of legend.

GAHLAN SURLAK — COMMAND

UNIT COMPOSITION: 1 GAHLAN SURLAK

135 Points

Once, Gahlan Surlak was an apothecary of the Legiones Astartes World Eaters, his mission to heal the wounds of his battle-brothers that they might return to battle all the faster. As his Legion fell from grace however, this mission drastically changed. At the orders of the Legion's High Command, Surlak focused his duties ever less upon healing the wounded and instead dedicated himself to the induction of Legion Aspirants who cared so little for pain they would never have to be healed – they would win the fight or they would die, there being no middle ground where a Legionary might require medical attention.

It was in the aftermath of the Isstvan betrayal that Surlak had revealed to him the hidden mysteries of blood and flesh, of genes and mutations, when he and a number of his peers were inducted into an inner circle of apothecaries, their high magus the Chief Apothecary of the Emperor's Children – Fabius. What Surlak and his fellow apothecaries learned from Bile they carried with them to Bodt, where upon Angron's orders they began a program of rapid indoctrination intended to usher in a new generation of Legion Aspirants who, thanks to his bloody artifice, would have no concept of pain, fear or defeat.

Using this Unit: This Unit counts as a Primus Medicae for the purposes of any interacting rules.
